Summary

My range of work spans from newspaper articles, to published books, to independent short films. I do not shy away from the prerequisite groundwork that is involved in creating something worth while, so I am eager to learn as much as I can by starting wherever I can. I learn as I go, think on my feet, and see projects to completion to the best of my ability.

Book Author

Nail Prints Press, LLC

Sep 2013 - Sep 2014 (1 year 1 month)

My senior year of high school, I wrote and debuted my first novel, "Lex." In addition to finishing up the school year and working a part-time job, I participated in the editing and publishing process of my book with established writers and an accomplished editor. The duration of publishing, I received one-on-one guidance from the company's CEO and head publisher.

Editor in Chief

Arlington High School Newspaper

Aug 2012 - May 2014 (1 year 10 months)

Throughout high school, I was an active reporter for the school newspaper, and became the first two-term Editor in Chief, serving as the leader my junior and senior year of high school. My responsibilities consisted of organizing the structure of the elective, pacing the schedule and encouraging students to turn in their work on time, working with local business owners to sponsor our production, assigning stories to fellow reporters, and editing their drafts before compiling them into a well-constructed high school paper.
