“My son Myles has been a working actor since he was ten years old. Jennifer Patten was his set teacher while filming the movie “All Saints” when he was in 8th grade. Not only was she a wonderful, compassionate teacher and a strong and knowledgeable advocate for Myles, she was also a kind friend and cheerleader to both of us. Jennifer called to introduce herself and I told her our situation, and she immediately put my mind at ease and gathered information for me and helped me get everything sorted in time. On set, she was an amazing teacher in all subjects, engaging and encouraging, and making lessons interesting and fun. She went above and beyond in facilitating his work on a weeks-long school project. She was exceptionally well versed in set protocols and regulations pertaining to child actors, and I had great confidence in her guardianship of Myles if I was not on set. I cannot recommend strongly enough having Jennifer as a set teacher. She is highly educated, funny, well prepared, and she leads by example. I can confidently say that I learned as much from her as Myles did, and her advice and affirmations stay with me 9 years later. In a time of confusion and disorganization, she was a calm voice and reminder to breathe and be present and enjoy the experience rather than get bogged down by the stress of the logistics. The six weeks we spent with her all those years ago made a life-long impact on both of us, and we are immensely grateful.”

“I have known Jennifer Patten as an educator for over 20 years. In my capacity as a Line Producer or Production Coordinator, I have hired her as Set Teacher on numerous feature films as well as a variety of video and music projects. Her ethics and teaching abilities are excellent, and she is highly regarded among both her educational peers and the Film and Video production community here in Nashville.”

I gladly give her my highest recommendation.

“Jennifer has been a great tutor for my daughter while she was working on Dolly Parton’s theatre project. She takes time to understand the subject material so that she can guide her in completing her assignments. She is kind and patient with the girls and is very reassuring in her demeanor.”
